Editorial. A busy week for all as we clamour to catch up on that lost hour of sleep last Sunday morning when we turned our clocks forwards after the successful Trivia Night.

Last week District Governor Bernie Walshe gave our club's health the two thumbs up. Our club members are very actively involved in District activities for a club our size, so it was great for Glen Eira to be recognised.

The Ian Marks Rotarian of the Month award was established and presented to initial winner, Ian Marks. Intriguingly, our President advised that this won't be presented every month, so we stay with bated breath as to when it will be presented!

Next week we have a week off for the Melbourne Cup, so we'll see you all back at the London Tavern in a fortnight.

Famous Rotarians

The Rotary Club of Wapakoneta in Ohio, USA includes amongst its membership Neil Armstrong. Neil is best known for being an astronaut and the first man to walk on the moon.

The Rotary Club of Sydney's deceased member Hudson Fysh followed his distinguished military career by starting his own airline. Today, Qantas is Australia's biggest airline and is universally regarded as the world's safest.

The Rotary Club of Auckland's Sir Edmund Hillary is best known for being the first man to set foot on the top of Mt Everest. Today with his mountaineering days behind him, we might find him at a sausage sizzle at Bunnings Takapuna?

The Rotary Club of Glen Eira's resident explorer is founding member and raconteur Dr Max Sherlock. In recent years, Max has toured Alaska, Europe, Australia, and wherever else wife Helen tells him where to go.

Clever Clogs scoop the pool

Geoff Asher recovers from the Trivia Night

Table 8, the Clever Clogs scooped the pool on Saturday night at Caulfield Park Bowling Club for the Rotary Club of Glen Eira's Trivia Night.

With funds raised going towards International projects, all had a good night to celebrate the 16th(?) birthday of Marian Dimand, who was resplendent in green.

The Quizmaster Adrian Nelson in his cream suit (or was it beige, ivory, or off-white?) took no prisoners. Jacques Süßmann was forced to perform Spanish dancing on the several occasions he disputed the umpires decision. Table 1's Berndt Nolle, egged on by Yoshiko Stynes, faced the people's vote when he tried to get bonus points when using his Joker card. He subsequently received the wrath of the other tables and a five point penalty.

The winning Clogs, led by our club's academic powerhouse Geoff Asher (ably supported by wife Coryl plus Judy and Kurt Langfelder and friends) won the night on the last question, with five final points for being nearest the pin with the date of the Treaty of Windsor. The Fookes' No Nuffins on Table 5 won a prize for most accurate table name. Thanks to the International Committee for putting on a fun night.

At home with President Larry

In the Kitchen

Most cooked dish: was pasta, now chicken & vegetables

Most used appliance: Wok, BBQ

Greatest accomplishment: a spectacular

ginger & garlic marinade

At Home

Favourite Film: Shrek (has a good friend who looks like Fiona)

If I was an animal, I would be: a cat (to sleep all day, eat when he wants, listen to nobody & be as temperamental as he wants) or a dog (to sleep all day, eat when
